Have your say about proposed retirement village reforms

Retirement villages are an important part of available housing options as we get older and Consumer Protection is keen to get your feedback about proposed reforms to legislation.

We recently released the final consultation paper in Stage Two of the retirement villages' legislation reform process in Western Australia, and all interested parties are encouraged to make a submission.

You can provide feedback on the phone, via email or through the post before submissions close on 21 July 2021.

The Consultation Regulatory Impact Statement 4 (CRIS 4) includes proposals for a new process to manage significant changes to a village, improving protections for consumers in 'off the plan' sales and leases as well as looking at options to improve dispute resolution processes.

The consultation is also seeking feedback on emerging issues relating to strata title retirement villages, building defects, insurance and the provision of home care services in retirement villages.

The most significant proposed legislative reforms in this paper aim to provide a better process to manage significant changes that might be required to a village.

The intention is to ensure the proposed changes are suitable for new and emerging village models while maintaining the necessary protections for residents.

This final paper is an important part of a broader consultation process on implementing recommendations made in the Statutory Review of Retirement Villages Legislation Final Report (2010) and in considering other issues that have arisen since that time.

Previous papers have canvassed reforms in a wide range of areas such as improving consumer understanding of the retirement village product and what residents pay; village refurbishment and capital works; and the payment of resident exit entitlements.

Consumer Protection also welcomes comment on any of the issues raised in previous papers in light of the information in this final paper, and any additional matters that respondents think should be considered.

View the consultation papers and get further information about making a submission on the Consumer Protection website at www.dmirs.wa.gov.au/retirement-villages-review. Enquiries and submissions can be made by calling 1300 304 054 and by email to consultations@dmirs.wa.gov.au

Don't be hasty when buying a home

Western Australia's residential property market is booming right now, so house-hunters may be feeling some pressure to buy now to avoid missing out in future.

While it might be a seller's market, we would urge buyers to avoid making hasty decisions they might later regret by doing their own research, asking lots of questions and seeking professional advice. There is no mandatory cooling-off period for real estate contracts in WA, meaning it's very difficult to back out once a written offer is signed.

If borrowing money to buy a property, it's wise to firstly research loan interest rates and conditions offered by various financial institutions before organising a pre-approved loan through your preferred lender, so you know how much you can borrow.

When the time comes to make an offer, you will need to complete and sign the box on the Offer and Acceptance document titled 'Finance Clause Is Applicable', and name the lender that has pre-approved the loan.

This point is important because if the loan isn't granted by that particular lender, then the contract may no longer be binding on the buyer.

If a lender isn't specified, the buyer would be legally bound to accept any loan offer, even if the terms of that offer may seem unreasonable.

It is important to understand all of the finance conditions before signing a contract, and to obtain professional advice if you are uncertain.

Unless the contract states otherwise, properties are sold in more or less the same state as when first inspected. That's why it is essential to conduct a thorough physical inspection of the property well before settlement is finalised. Consumer Protection was recently made aware of several property sales where settlement was delayed because the buyers had only discovered faults with the property at the final inspection.

If you want changes to be made to the property, or certain items to be included in the sale, you should insert specific terms into the contract to that effect. These terms would need to be accepted by the seller.

Our website at www.consumerprotection.wa.gov.au contains a lot of information about buying a property, including an inspection checklist, which covers the types of features to consider and potential questions to ask. For further information or advice, contact Consumer Protection at consumer@dmirs.wa.gov.au
